

Royal Navy

“Although the Royal Navy provides a number of its own Sixth Form Scholarships, it recognises the importance that Arkwright brings. Arkwright provides scholarships to students from all educational backgrounds and from all areas of the UK, yet continues to identify individuals of a uniformly high standard. Through the strong and respected name of the Arkwright Scholarship the Royal Navy believes that its profile as an attractive future engineering employer amongst Sixth Form students, is enhanced beyond that it could hope to achieve through its own efforts.”

Barrie Harvey, Staff Officer (Engineer Officer Recruiting)

“The Scholarship gave me the opportunity to concentrate on my ‘A’ Level studies without unnecessary distractions. I am also sure that it helped in opening my eyes to the depth and variation of careers available in the engineering field”.

“I know that the Royal Navy have their own Sixth Form Scholarship scheme, yet still hold the Arkwright in high regard. Arkwright opened my eyes to engineering possibilities within the Royal Navy and I now receive a valuable bursary while at university. Providing I pass my degree I am guaranteed a job and a career as an Engineering Officer – a great position to be in.”

William Grey, Arkwright Scholar
Awarded September 1999 at St Edward's College, Liverpool

Since 1997 the Royal Navy have sponsored 40 Scholarships.

Benefits to the Royal Navy:

- Constant stream of young enthusiastic engineers
- Access to high calibre candidates from geographical areas where the Navy's role is not well understood.
- Helps students to be more aware of the Royal Navy and the opportunities for a career in engineering.
